

Volunteering in addressing the UN Sustainable Development Goals

Graduate School of International Studies, Hanyang University

Kim Seoyeong

Improving the quality of life of human beings all over the world can be a challenge for the UN to pursue, plan and solve. Although the Millennium era began in 2000, the Millennium Development Goals have been set to reduce poverty and inequality, which have been unresolved on an ongoing basis, and to improve the real life of humankind. And pursued the tasks to achieve. With the end of the Millennium Development Goals in 2015, aiming to improve the quality of life of people living on the earth centering on new sustainable development goals from 2016.

According to the details, ending all forms of poverty on earth, ending hunger and securing food security, improving nutrition and promoting sustainable agriculture, ensuring a healthy life and promoting welfare for all generations, broad and high quality education To provide lifelong learning opportunities, to promote gender equality and passport growth, to ensure access to clean water and sanitation facilities that can be provided for all, to provide reliable, sustainable and modern energy at the right price , Providing inclusive and sustainable growth and employment, providing quality jobs, building resilient infrastructure and promoting inclusive and sustainable industrialization and innovation, eliminating inequalities within and between countries, secure and resilience Sustainable consumption and production, response to climate change, the oceans and the oceans protection and sustainable use of the two resources, sustainable forest management, prevention and restoration of desertification and land destruction, prevention of biodiversity reduction, creation of a just, peaceful and inclusive society, strengthening of global partnership and means of implementation for sustainable development . (Detailed target 169)

A detailed plan to improve the quality of life of human beings around the world can be established, focusing on the specific goals of sustainable development. Of course, the implementation of established plans is to solve problems that are present on the planet and threaten humanity. It can also be thought that it is necessary to go through the efforts of many people. It is up to human beings to plan and envision effective ways, implement and resolve processes with the goal of improving the quality of human life. Many of those with a high quality of life are looking at the lives of those who are not, and many of them participate in volunteer activities, one of the ways in which human life can be sustained and sustainable.

People who belong to a society called community can participate in social or public interests. At this time, volunteer activities can be described as those who act or participate with their own will rather than others. In general, this is done through a nonprofit organization. In addition to formal activities, it is easy to find cases where individuals or groups are free to do things in a specific frame and form. Numerous volunteer activities that can be easily seen around us are the main goal of improving the basic quality of life in the space of society and improving it.

The goal of the UN's sustainable development goals is to ensure that the environment, conditions, etc. in which humans live determine the quality of life. One of the ways to achieve this goal is to emphasize volunteerism. A wide range of volunteer activities is seen as necessary in all areas in order for human life to develop prosperously. As described above, there will be no areas that do not require volunteer work in 17 areas of sustainable development. In particular, it is no exaggeration to say that poverty and the end of hunger and education are centered on volunteer activities of relief organizations and individuals.

Volunteerism can play a big role for the peaceful development of mankind and the creation of a just and inclusive society. From a historical point of view, it can be seen that volunteer activities for the reconstruction of humanity have increased since World War II. This is a case in which volunteer activities have played an important role in helping mankind to lead a peaceful life. In particular, there are volunteer relief organizations and individual volunteers in the refugee-related issues that have been steadily emerging from the past to the present. Through their efforts, those who leave the country under unequal threats from instability within the country can be liberated and protected to some extent from the threatening elements. It is not perfect, but it also receives clean water and food supplies, settlement problems, medical and educational support. This can be seen as solving mainly through volunteer efforts that ultimately endeavor to help or support the goal of enabling human life to escape from the threat and make real improvements.

The role of volunteer activities will gradually become larger and more concrete to solve the UN's sustainable development goals. In order to realistically improve the problems faced by mankind, man's power and effort are needed in the end. It can be ironic and contradictory, but it is easy to say that the cause of human quality of life and problems is the human being. It is a reality that the problems and problems caused by people can only be improved and solved through volunteer activities involving the power and effort of the people.